Though it doesn't have any "God mode" technology that lets you easily make great-looking films, the app does have a pretty strong library of more than 30 effects and tools that you can use to start experimenting with cool transitions, filters, overlays, titles, and other things for videos," they continued. One of EditFun's great features is its ability to quickly assemble your edited files into a complete video for sharing. All you have to do is select the files in the app's library, drag them onto the various editing tracks and add captions. It's also worth pointing out that when you find an effect or video-splicing tool you like, you can easily share it on one of the many social network tools you can use in EditFun. "The main screen is nice and simple with a spinning globe in the top-right corner, but don't let that fool you -- there are numerous ways to go about creating the finished film," the CNET editors wrote. "A quick tutorial window opens when you start the app, and it'll quickly walk you through the process of making your first video. Once you create a video, you can preview it on the main screen, or add any remaining effects, transitions, or music you want before sharing." EditFUN Android app (64.0MB) IOS app (61.9MB) Free EditFUN Play Store (Search-EditFUN) (Image via Featureimage) I think Google+ is a terrible product, and that Google killed it. I have nothing against the product itself, as I used it more than once, but it had problems that Google should've known about. Never was I able to make it work. It was an uncool product that I never used after it dropped the ball. It was broken. I even gave it a go on my iPad. I was happy as a clam because I thought that maybe it worked better on an iPad, as that is the future, so I was happy with it. Nope. I couldn't sign in either. I even tried deleting the app and reinstalling it. Nope. It was and is broken on the iPad. And that was probably the last time that I used it and the last time that I am using it. It was a horrible user experience. And it worked perfectly fine on the iPhone. The main problem was that it was broken. And it was constantly breaking. I was never able to use it, even if I signed in, and I got more and more frustrated. And it would fail, and I'd have to try over and over again. And it didn't work at all. And I was pissed, because I paid for it. I'm not the only one, this is a known problem with other people who bought it. And it is a fact that Google killed it. And Google was an asshole about it. I know this because I was lucky enough to have a Google rep right when I broke it, and he told me that he loved the product and that Google was the place to be, and that it would be fixed in a couple of days. I was so frustrated that I was about to curse out the Google rep. But I didn't, because I figured that I'd kick Google when I was down. But then it never got fixed. I figured that it was more of a feature than a problem, and it needed more servers
